

BCS Global has been named as one of the Best Managed Conferencing Service Providers for 2009 by Telepresence and Videoconferencing Insight

Toronto, Canada, March 4, 2010 - BCS Global Networks Limited (www.bcsglobal.com), a leading worldwide managed service provider of videoconferencing and telepresence solutions, has been named as one of the Best Managed Conferencing Service Providers for 2009 by Telepresence and Videoconferencing Insight newsletter.

These awards are given to those providers who have the ability to deliver innovative, reliable, easy-to-use and cost-effective solutions backed by global service and 24/7 support. BCS Global is pleased to receive this recognition for the third consecutive year.

BCS Global's CEO Clive Sawkins said "We are honored to be recognized as one of the leading managed videoconferencing service provider by Telepresence and Videoconferencing Insight. In my view, this award is a recognition for BCS Global's unrelenting focus on customer service, and having received this award for three consecutive years reiterates it."

Richard Line, Editor at Telepresence and Videoconferencing Insight Newsletter said about the awards, "We focus on what the customers need from a managed service provider; automated call set up and monitoring the successful operation of video conferences. We also look at the capability to handle point-to-point and multipoint telepresence calls. The Editor takes the side of the user and looks for innovation, reliability, ease of use and price-performance. The provider must offer a global service and 24/7 support. Above all, we look for satisfied customers, excellent service and recognition by others in the form of awards or certification."

He added: "BCS Global with its managed service has assisted many companies to improve communications, reduce travel, improve the work-life balance of their staff and help the environment. They are a truly outstanding service provider."
